Our Street Crossings

It is not quite as opportune to kick against the street crossings, or the absence of them, as it was a week ago, when to go from one side of the street to the other was an adventure—and not a beautiful adventure either, as that described by the late Charles Frohman as he leaned against the rail of the sinking Lusitania. Most of us would prefer to go down in the clear blue waters off the Irish coast than to sink into a sea of Phoenix mud.

We are in full sympathy with two correspondents who have lately addressed feeling communications to this paper on the subject of the street crossings.

It is not possible to establish first class crossings throughout the city. It may not be possible to have even any sort of crossing in all parts of the town, but we think some sort of an arrangement can be made to provide the nearer residence districts with crossings, if not for the convenience of citizens, for advertising purposes.

After every rain people who live on streets remote from the paved district have to overload themselves with old newspapers, magazines and periodicals of all kinds which are torn up and thrown upon the mud to walk on. Days afterward when the mud has disappeared the streets are littered in the vicinity of every crossing with scraps of paper fully as disreputable in appearance as that torn document which had been vainly drawn to guarantee the integrity and neutrality of Belgium.

It unfortunately happens that the rainy season comes when our winter residents are here, so that they cannot help instituting comparisons between our street crossings and those crossings of their northern home towns which are solid and clean—where the earth is at least frozen or covered with pure, white snow.

A disagreeable impression is always far more deep seated and lasting than a pleasant impression, so that when the visitor leaves for his home he is apt to forget the balmy winter, the greenery and sunshine, and remember only the bogs that threatened to engulf him when it rained.

Wickenburg

People coming from Wickenburg all speak of the great activity which has taken hold of that town, unlike anything in its previous history. There is such an influx of visitors that it is difficult to find a place to sleep. There is a great deal of building going on. A half dozen new houses of good construction have been erected within the last month and more are under way but the additional room does not keep pace with the growing demand for more.

It is mining that is doing it. Within the last two months more than twenty mining deals have been effected in that district. There is a sampling plant there, a new institution, and it is kept busy all the time. People who are familiar with Wickenburg say there is no doubt that it is now going to grow rapidly and become one of the great camps in the southwest.

Wickenburg has always been a mining town and it attained its greatest importance in the palmy days of the Old Vulture, though there have always been other promising mines in that vicinity. There is no district where there is a more general dissemination of mineral. But for a quarter of a century operations in that district have been carried on in a rather small way.

Now capital is coming in in large volume and Wickenburg appears to be getting its full share of the benefit of the mining boom which has settled upon the whole state. As a junction point now Wickenburg possesses advantages which it never enjoyed before.

Still at Large

This is a purely personal matter, in which we seldom indulge in this department. A few days ago a telegram from the Coconino Sun was received by the Republican inquiring whether the editor was in jail. Knowing Colonel Breen to be a humorist, it was assumed that he had chosen to pay telegraphic tolls for the privilege of perpetrating a joke and no reply was made. It was a busy night. But certain things have since occurred which convince us either that a serious impression is abroad in the state regarding restrictions which have been placed upon the editor or else there is a wide conspiracy of jokesmiths. Inquiries have come from all parts of the state as to the freedom or lack of it, of the editor of this paper.

He is not in jail, he has not been in jail and, with his consent, will not be in jail. The rumor had its origin in a certain article appearing in The Republican a week ago, which very naturally was disturbing to the supreme court. If the members of the court had been irritable gentlemen or even gentlemen of normal irritability, we suppose somebody, but not the editor, would have gone to jail. There was some talk we believe of issuing a citation though the court itself indulged in no such talk. The court contented itself with deprecation in terms as effective as a jail sentence would have been and the incident was then closed.

There are, no doubt, in Phoenix and elsewhere in Arizona, persons of morbid tendencies who like the thrill of tragedy, and some of our warm friends among them, who would have liked to see how the jail bars would look with the editor of this paper for a background. The Coconino Sun will please copy.

Democrats are awfully contentious. It appears that there is nothing concerning which they can be unanimous. The electors were unable to agree who shall carry the electoral vote back to Washington.

Considering the experiences of the messenger four years ago, when he got lost and hardly arrived at the electoral college in time to matriculate, they ought this year to hire some reliable republican, progressive or other person capable of carrying a message to Garcia.

The people of Arizona are warranted in expecting some constructive work by this legislature. The signs are right and the best sign is the character of the men and women who compose the body. The majority is made up, not of standpatters and not of radicals, but of conservatives in whom, after wandering in the wilderness for five years, we may put our trust.

As we understand it, whatever Governor Hunt may do, legally or illegally, twenty-eight members of the democratic state executive committee stand ready to imitate themselves in his service. There's loyalty for you such as no other politician ever commanded; at any rate, the followers of no other politician ever made so frank an avowal of their devotion.

We know of no more effective and logical method of educating the people to the need of accident insurance than that employed by two Phoenix solicitors—"beating up" the "prospects" to make them take out policies. That was a plain illustration of the fact that accidents and personal injuries occur in the most unexpected ways.

The claims of the Hunt inspectors that the figures now show the governor to be ahead might be convincing if they would take the public into their confidence by showing how those figures were arrived at. A bare assertion that Hunt is in the lead carries no more weight than if it had been made before the inspection was begun.

If congress has the right to fix trainmen's wages, it might go farther and fix maximum prices for the necessities of life—at least such of them as enter into interstate commerce. That would be a simple and easy solution of the high cost of living problem.

The "leak" investigation is likely to lead to nothing more startling than that Thomas W. Lawson has lost none of his aversness for the spotlight.

JUDGE GARY'S RECIPE FOR SUCCESS

In the January American Magazine Judge Gary gives his recipe for success. He says about a young man:

"1. He should be honest, truthful, sincere and serious.
"2. He should believe in and preach and practice the Golden Rule.
"3. He should be strong and healthy, physically and morally.

"4. His habits and mode of living should be temperate and clean and his companions selected with regard to their character and reputation.
"5. He should possess good natural ability and a determination constantly to improve his mind and memory.

"6. He should possess a good education, including particularly the fundamentals, such as mathematics, grammar, spelling, writing, geography and history; and also a technical education concerning the lines he proposes to follow.

"7. He should be studious and thoughtful, keeping his mind upon a subject until it is mastered.
"8. He should be conscientious, modest but courageous, energetic, persistent, even-tempered, economical, faithful and loyal to his friends and the interests he represents."

AFTERNOON FROCK FOR SPRING WEAR

A graceful frock made of pussy willow taffeta is one of the simplest dresses that has yet been seen among the spring fashions. The vest effect gives the bodice smart lines. Although its simplicity is extreme, the gown is natty and no doubt will be popular with the younger set.

HURLEY AND TRIBOLET IN PEACE PACT

Peace has been established between friends of long standing and a series of law suits dismissed as a result of a settlement between H. T. Hurley and S. J. Tribolet through the efforts of Judge Frank O. Smith who sat in the case in which Hurley sued to gain possession of certain property which Tribolet had agreed to sell him.

The property comprising 207½ shares of stock in the Phoenix Wholesale Meat and Produce company and the Tribolet Meat Market will go to Hurley as a result of the settlement. The suit on note which Hurley also instituted against Tribolet will be dropped by the payment of the note which amounts to $1500 and the sale of Hurley's interest in the Kay Copper Company for $1500. The assault and battery charges against Tribolet will be dismissed.

Hurley will pay the original price offered for the stock in the Produce company, $150 a share and he will secure the market according to the contract price of $14.00.

The suits will be paid by both the plaintiff and defendant.

It took the lawyers from noon until six o'clock to reach an agreement which met with the approval of their clients. It took Judge Smith just long enough to hear the testimony of Tribolet and Hurley to know that such an agreement should be reached. Then he addressed the opposing counsel. "I suppose you gentlemen on both sides have used your best endeavors to reach a solution of this matter without contest of the case in court. It is, of course, a case in which a large amount of money is involved, at the same time it must turn in the end upon some very simple propositions. These two men are oldtimers here, have known each other many, many years and it seems to me with the attorneys present that there should be a solution for this difficulty. I am perfectly willing to continue the trial of the case but if these parties think that with their attorneys they can talk this matter over and arrive at a solution it would save a lot of costs and a great deal of time for very busy attorneys."

LOVE OF HIS MOTHER DRAWS ESTOPPEY ON LONG HARD JOURNEY

It is something more than honor or money that prompted Eugene Estoppey, of San Diego, to start a cross-country journey on bicycle and on foot from Maricopa, Cal., to Washington D. C. and New York city—it is the love for his aged mother.

It was not many days ago that Estoppey received in the mails word that his mother, in her faraway home in New York city, was succumbing to the strength of old Father Time. The gray-haired old lady, her face wrinkled by the years, each line denoting some hard-fought battle, had expressed a sincere longing once more to see her boy before she was robbed of her sight. Estoppey himself has had a hard struggle in the worldly fight for a livelihood and on the face of circumstances his mother's greatest wish was doomed to die in her boy's arms. Miles separated them and it cost money—lots of money—to ride on the trains.

Fortunately, Estoppey is not easily discouraged and with the strength of a rugged mountaineer, he devised a plan whereby it was possible to bridge the distance from coast to coast and to grant a mother's last wish.

That is the reason that Mr. Estoppey was in Phoenix last night. He is en route from San Diego to Washington, D. C. and New York city. He is making the trip on bicycle and foot, larger and stronger men, physically, have shirked at a duty much less hazardous and wearisome.

The trip, by the way, is not what might be termed one of pleasure. Estoppey, short of funds and therefore forced to live on the smallest rations possible, has already been forced to spread his blanket on the desert, with only the sky as protection, on two different occasions thus far. What he will do when he strikes the colder sections of the country, even he himself is fearful to venture an opinion. But he is imbued with the spirit that at the end of his journey a suitable reward will crown his effort, that of a kiss from his mother. He will consider himself well repaid for the long journey by one kiss from his mother," said the California man last night. Surely, man never placed a higher value on a mother's kiss than does he.

BUSINESS GIRLS CLUB HAS BENEFIT CONCERT

Tickets are being distributed through all the drug stores for the benefit concert of the Business Girls' club of the Young Women's Christian association tomorrow night.

Prominent on the program will be Miss Elizabeth Garrett, the famous blind girl composer and singer, who is visiting here from her home in New Mexico. Miss Garrett's work has already been found good by Phoenixians who will appreciate an opportunity of hearing her once more.

The concert will be given in the club room of the girls' club, in the Central School building, and will start at eight o'clock.

MORGAN TENDERS RESIGNATION

(Special to The Republican)
JEROME, Jan. 10.—David Morgan tendered his resignation today as director of the Green Monster Mining company in a communication to the company saying: "Owing to the properties I am connected with requiring my entire attention it becomes imperative that I tender my resignation as director of your company. It is my desire that it become effective immediately." Mr. Morgan is prominent in the affairs of the United Verde Extension which was opened under his management. He is now with the Verde Combination.

WILKY PAYING LITTLE HEED TO OUSTER CHARGE

Paying little heed to the charges which H. F. Dillman will place against him in the superior court, Sheriff W. H. Wilky yesterday discussed the ouster proceedings which will be instituted by his self-styled "campaign manager," Dillman.

The sheriff denied all the allegations made by Dillman.

He stated that he had not exceeded the $200 allowed by law for primary election expenses nor had he made an election promise.

He said that Dillman had never been his manager, nor had he offered him the position of undersheriff. Dillman had applied for a deputyship, but had not been considered competent by the sheriff and had been turned down.

"He is a sore head," was the way he was described by Wilky.

In accordance with the law, Wilky filed his expense account during the primaries with Clarence Standaug, clerk of the board of supervisors. It follows:

Phoenix, Arizona, Sept. 15, 1916.
To the Honorable Board of Supervisors of Maricopa County, State of Arizona.

MINE BUILDING TO START SOON

Dr. E. R. von Klein Smid, president of the University of Arizona, recently came to Phoenix for the purpose of depositing with the state treasurer the sum of $75,000, which is to be used in building the new home for the mining engineering departments of the university.

The last legislature appropriated $75,000 toward a new mining building, provided that a like sum be raised from outside sources, the mining companies of the state accordingly donating $100,000 for this building, divided in proportion to their equipment of its kind in the country.

On December 15, the architects' competition for the plans of the new building closed, and after due consideration, the plans of John B. Lyman, Jr. of San Diego, were selected by the board of regents, upon the recommendation of the faculty of the college of mines and engineering.

It is rather remarkable, and shows the ability of the architect, that Mr. Lyman was the winner from 18 other competitors in the contest for the new building, which was recently completed, and was the winner from 14 other competitors for the mining building. His plans had the unanimous endorsement of the faculty.

Ground will be turned for the building within a short time, and it is anticipated that the laboratories and shops will be completed and ready for occupancy by the opening of the next college year.

The new stone wall covering over 1,400 feet of the Park avenue side of the university campus is completed and stands as a monument to the generosity of the citizens of Tucson.

For many years the wooden and pipe fence on the front of the campus has been somewhat of an eyesore. Accordingly a short time ago a "buy-a-foot-of-fence" day was started, and sufficient money was raised to encourage the university authorities to start the fence. Many hundreds of people bought a foot or more of the fence, and while the amount needed has not yet been raised, the chamber of commerce has assured the university that the balance will be taken care of promptly.

The university is greatly indebted to Dr. P. T. MacDougal of the Carnegie foundation who furnished the stone for the fence, making the actual cost of the fence that of putting it up.

Chandler News

STILL COMING
And still every day sees new people coming in to Chandler. On Monday A. Pluckett and family arrived from Oklahoma and are now located in the west part of town. Another late arrival is Omar George, a former rancher in the Chandler district. The Henderson family of Tempe are newcomers now living on the ranch recently vacated by Robert Merrill. Another newcomer named Anderson will take the E. W. Monroe ranch when Y. P. Yarbrough moves to the Morrison ranch this week.

Wonderful Arizona

A Hint to Marriageable Spinsters

Our valentine state is a wonderful country. Everything therein is unique and on a large scale. It has the grandest scenery and the biggest reservoir in America. It has high mountains, high taxes and high-falooten human bi-peds, crooked rivers and crooked politicians; big men with swish heads and big pumpkins heads; scholarly editors with fertile brains who scribble Jules Vernish editorials and sanctimonious evangelists who grind out theology with drowsy rhetoric; large cattle ranches with large fat cattle and lots of human cattle; big dry old maids and dry men; streams whose waters gamboled on its feeble lands and religious hypocrites that gamble in the dark. The finest athletes in the base ball and foot ball games and the loveliest ladies in all the gorgeousness of the decolette attire.

A mooseman parley—cons who admires our Arizona belles, exclaimed: "Aht ze charmanes ladies wit ze low neck dress, ze low neck shoes and ze high neck shirts, vat an intoxicating beauty is ze joy for nevermore."

By the way, charming ladies, permit me to give you a hint. There is going to be an exodus of something like five million women from Europe to this country at the close of the war. There will be bewitching young maidens, old maids with cranky dispositions, school marmes, spinsters, shrewd and attractive widows (nests and otherwise) who will cast their nets to catch husbands; young and old men, octogenarians, widowers with sixteen kids, one-legged and one-eyed.
